

Research School on Successful Dispute Settlement in International Law

The University of Heidelberg Law School (in cooperation with the Max-Planck-Institute for Comparative Public Law and International Law) awards

Doctoral Research Positions (starting June 2008) for studies leading to a Doctorate in Law (Dr. jur.).

Research objective: How can the success of international dispute resolution be explained? How must successful dispute resolution be organized? The topic includes private and public international law (arbitration, mediation) as well as international criminal law.

Financial terms: Monthly stipend; travel and other expenses

Duration: up to 3 years

Requirements:

- Excellent Law Degree
- Acceptance as a doctoral candidate by a professor participating in the program
- Good command of German and English

(In special cases, the doctoral thesis can be written in a different language)

Further Information: www.ipr.uni-heidelberg.de/graduierntenkolleg

Applications must be submitted by 16 May 2008 to

Prof. Dr. Burkhard Hess
Institut fuer auslaendisches und
Internationales Privat- und Wirtschaftsrecht
Augustinergasse 9
69117 Heidelberg, Germany

